Driving in Changeable Conditions

Winter driving is dangerous enough without the added distraction of cell phones. Now we are really talking hazardous driving. SafetyWorld lists "the all-seasons Do's and the Don'ts" to combat this latest and ever widening distraction of using cell phones while driving. Also included in the Outline are the "How to skills" of Winter driving.

Driving hazards occur more frequently than you think. Always drive with caution.

Defensive driving is like breathing... a lifesaver. How many times have you seen other drivers taking reckless chances by jumping lights, overtaking dangerously or making careless lane changes? Your own safety often depends on how quickly you can stop, so read here about the 'two second rule' that should help you get home safely every night.

Prepare for the Worst.

It's all here, a crash course in winter driving. Learn why defensive driving and adjusting your speed to road conditions will develop your survival skills. Technologies like all-wheel drive, traction control and electronic stability control are a big help, but that's all. Never blame the weather or a vehicle for an accident; driving is your responsibility.

Be up-to-speed with road safety!

"Road Warrior", is a cult movie where roads became battlefields, with a complete breakdown of civilization. Sounds familiar? In today's world, "inattention blindness" causes vehicle collisions, road hazards being ignored and multi-tasking occurring while speeding along highways. This Outline identifies who is most at risk, then offers defensive driving solutions. Use it carefully! Safe driving is your call!

Drive slowly in parking areas.

Do the 'rules of the road' apply in parking areas? You better believe they do, even though the parking area may be private property. Many unfamiliar rules could also apply because drivers and pedestrians, each believe they have the right of way. Read all about them here. YOU MAY BE THE PEDESTRIAN.

Look left and right when entering intersections.

Please believe every driver on the road, EXCEPT YOU, is an idiot! Failure to yield and running red lights are common. Maybe other drivers are too busy on their cell phones? While not a driving test, this is a good wake-up call that must be taken to heart by your employees as they discuss it.

Drive with caution. Keep safe on the road this winter!

Most people feel safe driving on dry pavements but what about wet conditions or even worse, snow-covered roads? With changing seasons it's often like learning to drive again, so be extra cautious. The examples included show how weather related accidents frequently happen and how courtesy and common sense promotes safety.

Driving hazards are more numerous than they seem.

This is hard to believe! Statistics pinpoint what is happening on today's roads and then we provide suggestions so you and your family will not become part of the data. Someone once said, 'Safety is a state of mind—Accidents are an absence of mind'. Help your employees realize how dangerous it is out there.
