HAZARDOUS WASTE? You will be blaming me for Global Warming next!

Improperly discarded solid, liquid or gaseous waste materials can endanger human health and the environment. This Guide will help inform employees about the benefits of reducing, reusing and recycling waste, as well as educating them about the dangers of working with hazardous materials. As a bonus, undertake a waste materials audit and save your company money.

Hazardous waste is monitored from the cradle to the grave. Do your bit to dispose of it.

This Outline should be used as an introduction to hazardous waste safety procedures. It will inform workers about the various dangers when working with toxic substances and why dumping poses a serious environmental threat. It offers supervisors the opportunity to discuss PPE, a company's emergency plans and why precise records must be maintained.

Sort and separate. It helps to protect the environment.

The emphasis here is designed to supplement an employee's Three R kinder-garden education with the 21st Century's new Three R's... 'Reduce, reuse, recycle'. Besides exploring the violent impact some work processes have on the environment, it suggests ways to reduce these hazardous repercussions, while at the same time protecting employees. Protecting the environment is everybody's job!

Save Energy, Save Money, Save the Environment.

Here you are the teacher and the pupil. While this topic contains many fabulous ideas for saving energy, encourage your employees to identify other ways, both at work and in their homes, where everyone can reduce, reuse and recycle. Have them develop good habits, then count the benefits -
- Using less energy reduces costs.

The environment is not yet in their hands...Let's protect it for them.

Take a close look why WE, THE PRESENT GENERATION, must protect the environment. Besides outlining current legal obligations, the information enumerates many work place hazards, and then identifies ways to reduce their environmental impact. Ensure employees fully understand company policies, then tell them how to work safely with the many hazardous materials present in the workplace.

Keep hazardous waste out of the environment

What is the Earth? A thin layer of water, land and air. AND ONCE IT'S GONE THERE IS NO MORE!! Natural resource depletion should worry you ... play your part and recruit your employees! They have a vested interest. This topic is a good start offering various ways to REDUCE, REUSE and RECYCLE our precious natural wealth.

Help avoid contaminating the air. Keep it safe for all.

Introduce workers to potential sources of airborne contaminants, then specify the approach management takes to ensure that your workplace air quality is like breathing...you never want it to stop. To help employees avoid contaminating the air, a catalogue of 'do's and don'ts' is provided and management's responsibilities should ensure employees 'do the do's, not the don'ts'.

It's all we've got and it's rather fragile.

You can tailor this information to inform employees how legal Environmental Protection Agencies ensure industry does not unnecessarily harm the environment. Use this simple Outline with your company's MSDS, a product of EPA legal requirements, to instruct workers how to protect themselves and others when handling, storing or working with hazardous materials.
