Don't be overconfident and take ladders for granted.

Fear of heights is a common feeling but sometimes people, who work at heights, lose this protective fear. This Outline's great checklist will re-emphasize these defensive instincts. It includes descriptive dialogue on the correct use of ladders and the necessary actions by workers to ensure safe usage. Safety comes one step at a time; practice it.

Are you competent to use a ladder?

The poster heading says, "Ladders are safe at any height...when you follow safety rules". But does your team know the rules? The best teams know the right ladder for the job and, if the ladder and work site is safe. That perhaps is basic knowledge, but there are many, many more rules to learn. Read them and DON'T weep!

Ladders are safe at any height -- provided you follow safety rules.

This topic highlights the 'ups and downs' of ladder safety. The fear of heights is a natural human reaction, so teach workers specific rules included here to help them overcome these apprehensions. They include equipment design specifications, ladder inspection care and most importantly, climbing and descending behaviour. Take ladder safety one step at a time.
